

Our events are scheduled to be hosted virtually in 2022 until further notice.

Please note: We hope to resume our face-to-face conferences during summer 2022. However, should the status of the pandemic not allow us to do this safely, our events will continue to be delivered virtually. Please check individual event pages for details.

In response, we are offering virtual sponsorship opportunity for companies and organisations who wish to support our programme, and position themselves at the centre of interactions within multidisciplinary scientific, academic and research communities.

Our programme funds, develops and delivers training and conferences that span basic research, cutting-edge biomedicine, and the application of genomics in healthcare.

If you are interested in exhibiting virtually, please view the opportunity below:

How to get the most from our virtual platform during the event:

- Make sure you submit all your promotional materials at least one calendar month prior to the event start date – this will give you maximum brand visibility during the event.
- Use the chat function within the portal to contact delegates directly, as well as engage on the topics being discussed, using the Q&A function available during each session.
- Make sure you have a company representative available to monitor your dedicated Slack channel.
- Look out for attendees who display their email addresses during the event – these individuals have opted-in to share their contact details with interested parties.
- Make announcements on your social media channels using the relevant event hashtag. You can ask the event organiser to give you the relevant details.

Some of our events also offer spatial chat – which is a great way to network with people who are open to being approached in a relaxed virtual space.
